SITUATION SUMMARY

Cal OES SOUTHERN REGION

Virulent Newcastle Disease (VND) in backyard poultry and avian in Los Angeles and San Bernardino Counties

The California Department of Food and Agriculture (CDFA) has detected virulent Newcastle Disease (VND) in chickens in Los Angeles and San Bernardino Counties.

- On 05/18/18, CDFA detected VND in a small flock of backyard exhibition chickens in Los Angeles County, and confirmed by the United States Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS).
- CDFA is the state lead on the incident, with support from Cal OES and in collaboration with USDA.
- USDA Incident Management Teams (IMTs) continue to rotate every two weeks to facilitate the management and support the response to the incident. The Gold IMT transition into a two week rotation beginning 07/01/18.
- CDFA confirmed there are no commercial premises currently involved and there is no public health risk due to this virus. Commercial surveillance actively continue to work with commercial premises in the surveillance zones on biosecurity to help protect their poultry from VND.
- USDA IMT is working with commercial poultry premises to encourage submission of samples for VND surveillance testing, facilitate the development of Secure Food Supply Plans, and assist with the issuance of permits to move materials on and off commercial premises within established control areas.
- Backyard Surveillance (education and outreach) continues in the surveillance zones.
- CDFA and USDA have scheduled a meeting on 07/10/18 with representatives from Animal Care and Control Agencies in San Bernardino, Los Angeles, Ventura, Riverside and Orange counties to provide information on the current efforts CDFA and USDA are implementing to control and eradicate VND in San Bernardino County and surrounding areas. The goal is to strengthen partnerships with as many agencies as possible to carry out the mission of stopping the spread of VND and eradicating this devastating disease.

Declaration

- On 06/26/18 at 1840 hours, the California State Warning Center (CSWC) received a report regarding Virulent Newcastle Disease (VND) from the California Department of Food and Agriculture (CDFA). CDFA has declared an Agricultural Emergency to provide the department the authority to activate internal emergency provisions and to expedite the request for permits and waivers required to perform designated activities under an emergency basis.

Activations

- San Bernardino Operational Area (OA) EOC is activated to Level 3 (lowest level) and will continue to monitor the incident.

Deployments

- One (1) Cal OES Southern Region Senior Emergency Services Coordinator (ESC) is deployed to the ICP as an AREP (Agency Representative). Operational Period of 0700-1900 hours.

WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

Northern California:

- Siskiyou and Modoc counties: Red Flag Warnings are in effect this afternoon through evening.
 - Strong gusty winds and low relative humidity will create the potential for significant fire spread of any new or existing fires.
- Modoc County: Fire Weather Watch in effect from Saturday afternoon through Saturday evening for strong gusty wind and low relative humidity .
- Kern County: Critical Fire Weather conditions due to single digit humidity and poor overnight recovery this morning through tomorrow night.

Southern California:

- Critical Fire Weather conditions across Southern California today through Saturday evening due to forecast excessive heat, gusty winds, low humidity, and possible thunderstorms.

Key Points

7/5 – 7/12

Friday-Saturday

- Critical fire weather concerns for southern California.
- Critical fire weather concerns for northeast California on Friday.
- Excessive heat for southern California.
- Beach hazards for south facing beaches due to swells from tropical cyclone Fabio.
 - High surf, strong rip currents, sneaker waves, and coastal erosion.

Sunday-Wednesday

- Above normal temperatures with the heat risk ranging from low to moderate.
- Monsoon moisture may trickle into southern California which could lead to thunderstorm development and new fire starts.
 - Potentially heavy rain and flash flooding may occur.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

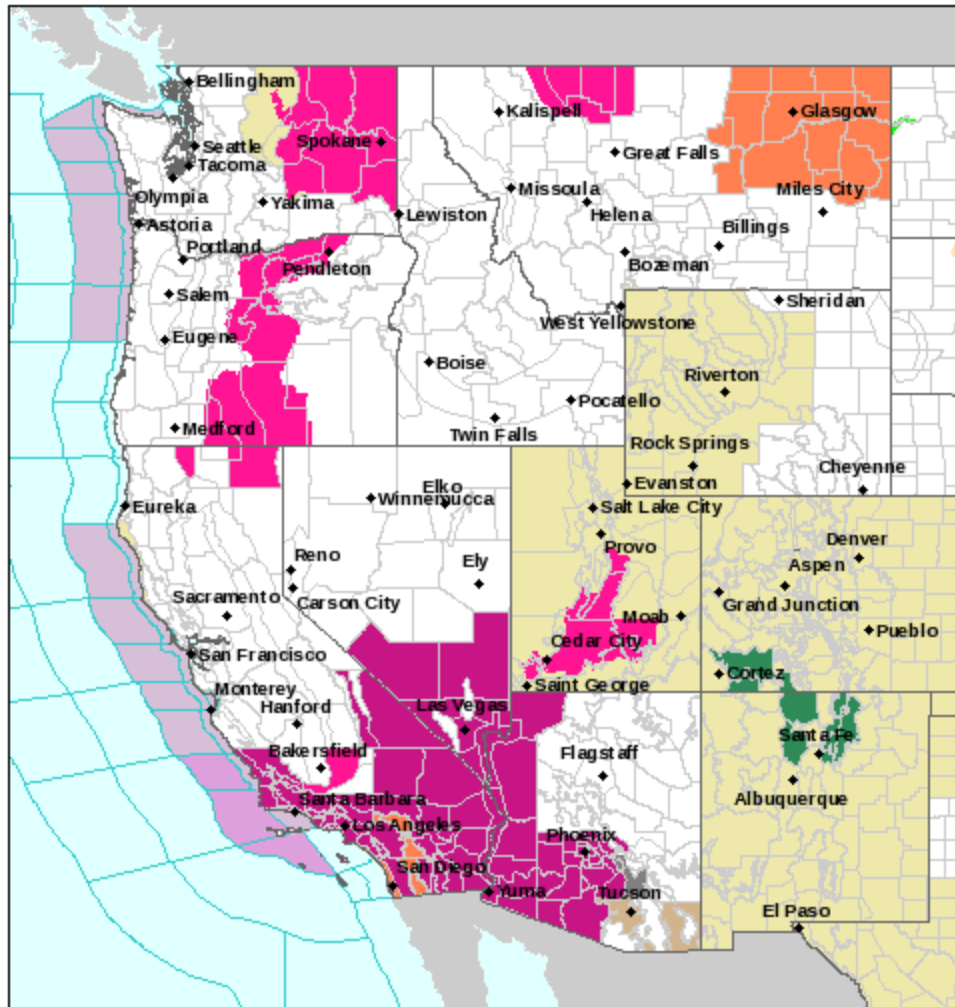

High Risk for gusty SW afternoon winds/Low Relative Humidity (RH) far Eastside and NE today and far Eastside Saturday/Sunday. Near term weather issues will be gusty winds and low humidity across the far north and east today and transitioning to the far east during the weekend. Weather conditions will ultimately trend warmer and drier ahead of a potential Monsoon Moisture burst late next week. Confidence is pretty good that Monsoon Moisture would make its way into the region but details of thunderstorm location and how much remains less confident. The offshore Pacific low will shift north and east today. A few weather changes will occur as a result of this low shift. The flow will turn more W-SW across the region and remain gusty across the far north and east. At the same time, higher level cloud cover and moisture from remnants of Hurricane Fabio will impact the area today into this evening before shifting east. Scattered, high based, showers will affect the area especially eastern portions of the area including Modoc/Lassen and Plumas counties. Can't rule out a stray lightning strike but those chances are pretty slim. The main weather story will be the gusty winds. Perhaps slightly subdued today due to the added cloud cover but still expect gusts between 25-30 mph across portions of NE CA and Far Eastside, coupled with 18-25% humidity. The gustier winds between 25-30 mph should remain across the Far Eastside Saturday afternoon and most likely again Sunday afternoon. Humidity values will ultimately trend a little lower during the weekend as temperatures warm. More teen values will be found within the Sacramento Valley and Far Eastside. A Four Corners High will become established this weekend and expand northward next week. Hot temperatures will return, especially the latter half of next week with readings ranging between 5 to 15 degrees above normal. A secondary Pacific low will wash out over the Pacific NW early next week and could create brief uptick in winds Monday/Tuesday. Otherwise, the main weather story will be Monsoonal Moisture flowing northward. Could come as early as Thursday for the region. The big question is how long it could last and how moist the storms get.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

High risk of large fires across portions of Santa Barbara and northern Los Angeles County through Saturday morning. Extreme heat/low RH today. Isolated thunderstorms expanding westward through the period. An active fire weather pattern is expected the next few days which will be punctuated by heat, low RH, locally gusty winds and the possibility of thunderstorms. A strong ridge of high pressure coupled with an extremely unusual and out-of-season offshore pressure gradient will produce record high temperatures over most of Southern California today. Already this morning, several sites are reporting temperatures in the 90s with minimum RH only in the single digits. This running start on temperatures will allow most of Southern California to reach the 100 degree mark, even at the beaches. The hottest temperatures will likely be in the valleys and lower foothills where some readings in the 110-115 range will be possible. Most areas of Southern California will see RH in the single digits throughout the day. Local north winds of 10-20 mph will be possible this morning in Santa Barbara County and the I-5 Corridor. These winds will decrease by afternoon, but are expected to increase to the 15-30 mph range with locally higher gusts tonight into Saturday morning. Saturday afternoon, pressure gradients will turn back onshore which will bring some cooling to areas south of Pt. Conception. However, Central CA will see temperatures continue to warm over the weekend with the hottest locations of San Luis Obispo County reaching 110 through Sunday. A further weather complication will come in the form of thunderstorms which will press westward the next few days. Only a handful of storms and buildups are expected in the desert and adjacent areas of the San Bernardino and Cleveland N.F's. But over the weekend, expect scattered storms to occur from the Kern County Mountains to the Angeles National Forest and all points south and eastward. A few dry strikes will be possible the next two days, but the storms Sunday through next week should all be slow-moving and capable of producing precipitation. Above normal temperatures along with scattered wet thunderstorms are expected to continue throughout next week. But winds should be light (aside from thunderstorms) after Saturday morning.
